THE PRESIDENT

It is also known that the physicians are Concerned About the Condition of the Wound than they are willing to admit. It has been indolent for some time past, and it was feared that the work of repair had been suspended. The discharge was small and of an unsatisfactory character, being and of an unsatisfactory character, being thin and watery, and gave rise to a fear that the pus, instead of following the nat-ural channel of exit, would become ab-sorbed, and of necessity cause further com-plications. Every effort is being made to guard against this dangerous indoience, and the report to day is that the wound shows signs of approaching activity.

The noonday bulletin is a good one and no mistake, and the symptoms, as indicated therein, are more favorable than at any time for the past two weeks. His pulse has not been below 100 since the morning of August 9, when it was 98. The day before it was 94. The President's temperature and respiration are both within the normal range to-day, and in conjunction with the reduced pulse show an altogether encouraging state of affairs. It looks as though the President had taken a good step forward to-day, and made more progress forward to-day, and made more progress than on any day since Friday last, which was at that time considered the beginning of the end.

Dr. Hamilton Refuses to be Interviewed.

Drs. Hamilton and Agnew left the White House together about 12:30 o'clook. Both of them declined to be interviewed. Dr. Hamilton said he could say nothing more than would be shown in the bulletin. A representative of a New York paper asked if he couldn't give him a few minute's conversation this evening. Dr. Hamilton asked, "As a reporter?" and receiving an affirmative reply, said he could not do it, as he made it a rule not to talk about this case outside.

Bliss Enthusiastic.

Dr. Bliss was very enthusiastic this afternoon over the improved aspect of affairs, and his words inspired cheer and confidence and his words inspired cheer and conneceded to all his disteners. He confirmed all the good that had been told about the gland, and said that the President was now getting along as well as they could possibly hope. Unless some new complication should arise, of which there is now not the least indication, the physicians could see nothing but

They felt confident of their ability to safely handle all existing troubles. Dr. Bliss stated that as far as they knew there had been no change in the location of the ball, but as for that matter, the wound was not giving them any trouble at all, and would not be considered till 'it did. Of course they proposed to make efforts to Determine the Location of the Ball beyond a doubt, but would certainly do nothing whatever in that regard while the President was in his present necessarily exhausted condition. "We propose, while he is getting along as well as he is now," said the Doctor, "to let him alone." The Doctor, upon being told of the many theories advanced as to the cause of the President's improvement, said he didn't care what others said about it; to his mind "Whisky did it." The trio engaged in a rough and tumble fight, in which Sowers and Mary Ann were beautifully cleaned out by the maiden with carroty curls, and a policeman was called in to preserve the peace. This he succeeded in doing by placing all hands under arrest and marching them to the station near by. When they leaned over the rail to give names, ages and occupations before being consigned to cells for the night, they presented a picture of wary and kemoralized humanity. The Catric was, through the courtesy of Mr. Bell, shown to-day the amount of newspapers, periodicals, magazines, &c., which daily accumulate in the office and are held for postage under law. Many magazines and novels, the prices of which vary from twenty-five cents to $1, are thus sacrificed because of the lack of one cent in postage. While letters unpaid for in full will be transmitted, second-class matter will not, and thousands of periodicals are weekly lost to those who send them and to those for whom they are designed, as the Postoffice authorities sell them for old paper as soon as the accumulation grows too great. All of those that are mailed by parties known to the office are returned to them by the carriers, and the office is very courteous in daily looking over the number of unprepaid papers for those who call and inquire, giving the names of the parties to whom they were addressed.

The only means by which certainty of delivery and transmittal of second-class matter can be inverted.

Largest Shoe House

Prevails among some people that large stores charge higher prices than those of moderate size. This is wrong. Large Cash Buyers can Sell Cheaper than small buyers. This is parlicularly the case at
